

Premangshu Chakrabarty, Professor

(Email : premangshuindia@yahoo.co.in), Department of Geography, Visva-Bharati, Santiniketan, West Bengal, India took his master and doctoral degrees from the same central university. He has received subsequent trainings in the field of Remote Sensing and GIS at NATMO(2008), RS cell, DST, Govt of West Bengal(2009), NBSS&LUP(2012) and IIRS, Dehradun(2016). Specialized in social, cultural and tourism geographies, he has contributed more than 60 number of research articles to different academic journals published from various sources. Apart from presenting research papers in International and National level Seminars, as well as Chairing/Co-chairing sessions, he regularly delivers invited lectures in different institutions and also in Refresher Courses. He is a member of editorial boards of a number of National Level geographical journals in India and also serving as a reviewer. He particularly undertakes research studies on sustainable development of backward areas and its people. A Major Research Project sanctioned by University Grants Commission, India for his research in this field is already completed. Seven scholars have already been awarded Ph D under his supervision. He has teaching experience of more than 19 years serving affiliated, government colleges and a state university where he served as Chairman of Under Graduate, Post Graduate and Research Board of Studies. He was awarded for his contribution as Head of the Department on the Independence day of 2014 for his service to Kalyani University before joining Visva-Bharati on 25.09.2014.

