Indian Knowledge Systems: Perspectives and Praxis

11-13 March 2026

Bangladesh Bhavana

Visva-Bharati, Santiniketan

About Visva-Bharati & IKS

Visva-Bharati has been a hub of Indian Knowledge Systems right from its very inception. Both Maharshi Debendranath Tagore and Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore were deeply immersed in the Indian Philosophical System. Accordingly, Maharshi created in Santiniketan a confluence of spirituality (Brahama Upasana), learning (library and school) and an engagement with the community (Grameen Mela). Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore, who shunned the artificiality of colonial education, created his educational institution based on the Gurukula, the Tapovana and the Ashrama, where nature, human beings, creativity and joyousness could merge with a kinship towards the local community. In his seminal essay “The Centre of Indian Culture”, written as a prelude to the establishment of Visva-Bharati, Tagore emphasized three crucial areas: a) the mind of India has to be concentrated and made conscious of itself b) the inspiring atmosphere of creative activity and the constructive work of knowledge - teaching should be like the overflowing water of this spring of culture, spontaneous and inevitable, and c) our education should be in full touch with our complete life, economical, intellectual aesthetic, social and spiritual, connected with it by the living bonds of varied co-operations. For, true education, Tagore wrote, is to realize at every step how our training and knowledge have organic connection with our surroundings. The key thrust of the IKS Centre at Visva-Bharati is to create an interdisciplinary body which will probe into the indigenous traditions of fine arts, performing arts, agriculture and edutainment sciences, thereby creating deliverables that will be circulated through the University and radiate to the community at large while invoking the spirit of creative joyousness. At every level of pedagogic practice, Tagore incorporated practices of Indian knowledge. His ideas of art, architecture, philosophy and science were deeply imbued with such practices. His institution created artworks, performances drawing upon indigenous people, folk forms, traditional agricultural practices and architecture. However, Tagore did not believe in any parochial bias and allowed a free flow of the best Western ideas so that Indian Knowledge Systems existed in conjunction with global knowledge systems to create Visva-Bharati as a true centre of global consciousness with its motto ‘Yatra Visvam Bhavatiekaneedam’ (where the world meets in a single nest).

About the Conference

The Conference aims to examine the Indian Knowledge System (IKS), emphasizing its historical foundations and current applicability. It seeks to establish a forum for exchanging concepts, encouraging discussion, and fusing conventional knowledge with contemporary developments. The event will highlight IKS's multidisciplinary nature by addressing topics related to humanities, philosophy, social sciences, communication, management, education, agriculture, music, yoga and traditional sports, music, art, design and architecture. A special focus of the conference will be its exploration of the experiments of Tagore in Visva-Bharati and beyond. The Conference aims to bring renowned professionals, researchers, contributions, opinions, and innovations to IKS and its integration into education.
