

About Conference

The International Conference aims to deepen critical understanding of the dynamic relationships between society, culture, and ecological landscapes shaped by natural and human processes. It explores historical and contemporary interactions through which communities transform, interpret, and sustain their environments amid challenges such as urbanization, climate change, migration, and environmental degradation emphasizing sustainable, inclusive, and participatory landscape governance.

The conference addresses themes including urban ecology, rural livelihoods, sacred and cultural landscapes, community-led conservation, health geography, and ecosystem restoration. Bringing together scholars, policymakers, and practitioners, it foregrounds indigenous knowledge, cultural practices, and symbolic meanings of space to envision equitable, resilient, and culturally rooted pathways for ecological sustainability and heritage conservation.
